The home of Hon. and Mrs. S. McC. Swope was tastefully decorated with spruce and white and yellow daisies. The ceremony took place beneath an arch of evergreen before the fireplace in the reception hall of the home. This portion of the home was profusely decorated with the green spruce and white daisies. Preceding the ceremony, Mr. Nicholas of college, sang "Love's Old Sweet Song." Then the orchestra played the Lohengrin wedding march and the bride and groom descended the stairs. Mrs. John D. At the foot of the stairs they were met by the flower bearers, Master Donald Swope and Miss Nancy Keith, who carried French baskets of daisies and scattered them before the party. At the arch altar the party was met by bridegroom and his best man, Mr. Bruce Elwell, of Boston. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. E. High School Alumni Play.

The High School Alumni outplayed themselves in the three act farce, "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," on Thursday evening at Walter's Theatre. It was the best ever and the nine alumni taking the cast of characters played more like professionals than amateurs. It was a farce with fun from start to finish and kept the crowded house in a roar of laughter. The cast of characters was as follows:

Jack Temple William Troxell
Frank Fuller Claire Sowers
Captain Sharpe Lawrence Sheads
Wigson Mahlon Hartley
John Brown Maurice Stallsmith
Mrs. Jack Temple Caroline Bream
Dorothy Nellie Ramer
Mrs. Frank Fuller

Minerva Taughinbaugh
Mrs. Brown Lily Dougherty
Jack Temple and Mrs. Frank Fuller take a car on a Ferris Wheel and when machinery gets out of order, have to spend the evening in the car at the top of the wheel. Around this incident, embarrassing situations and explanations follow one after the other in a succession of the ludicrous.

As special numbers on the program Miss Reba Miller sang a solo between the first and second acts, and between second and third acts a sextette of young ladies, Mary Hollinger, Mildred Stoner, Sara Reen, Mary Sheads, Helen Pfeffer and Nan Rudisill, appeared in costume in a number of Scotch songs. Music was furnished by the High School Orchestra.

There was but one setting, an interior, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Temple. It was tastefully arranged by Allan B. Plank, a member of the School Board.

Gasoline Tank Explodes.

A battery tester in his left vest pocket saved the life of A. L. Cleaver of New Oxford, who was struck over the heart on Wednesday by a piece of metal when a gasoline tank exploded in Clayton Myers' garage in New Oxford.

Cleaver took the gasoline tank of a Ford car to the Myers' garage to be soldered and while the proprietor was doing the work, he passed over an opening in the tank with a lighted torch and the tank exploded. Both men escaped serious injury. A number of windows in the garage were broken and minor damage was done.

Cleaver and Myers thought that they had completely drained the tank before the soldering was begun. It is supposed that the gasoline fumes remained in the tank, causing the resultant explosion.

Mr. Cleaver has charge of a force of men who are cutting out the woodland on the property of Frank Miller near New Oxford.

Humphreys at the Rodgers House on the Emmitsburg road, and to Gen. John W. Geary on Culp's Hill. No difficulty is expected with the passage of such an appropriation and the dedication of these monuments would likely follow during the year. The text of the bill is as follows:

"An Act making an appropriation to the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Commission for the transportation of honorably discharged soldiers who served in the Civil War to the dedication of certain statues erected at Gettysburg and for the expenses of said dedication and empowering the commission to carry out the purposes of this act.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same that the sum of five thousand dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary be and the same is hereby specifically appropriated to the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Commission for the necessary expenses for the transportation of honorably discharged soldiers who served in the Civil War residing in this Commonwealth to the dedication of the statues erected in memory of General Alexander Hays, General Andrew A. Supervisors' Association Meets.

The Adams County Supervisors' Association met in Gettysburg on Tuesday, February 27. At the morning business session the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: C. J. Deardorff of Franklin township, was elected president of the association, H. J. Reager of Freedom, and John Taylor of Menallen, vice presidents; W. F. Watson, of Hamilton, secretary, and Harry Weaver, of Highland, treasurer.

At the afternoon session in the Photoplay Theatre, W. S. Hammaker, assistant engineer of the State Highway Department addressed the supervisors. He explained to his auditors that in past years the Good Roads Day usually observed the last week in May, had been without any special system or direction, that each township had simply planned their work a few days in advance, and that, while the spirit manifested was fine, the results accomplished were not what they should have been. He further stated that it was planned to have a meeting within the next thirty days at which there would be present representatives of every county in the State, that these representatives would get their instructions, and that every county would then be apprised of where the work would be done in each township, how many men and teams would be required, and so on—everything being thoroughly systematized.

1. Pupils must present a report from their teacher in order to be permitted to take the examination.

2. Certificates will be given to those making an average of seventy with no mark below fifty.

3. Applicants desiring any information should ask the ex-aminer; communicating with any one other than the examiner will disqualify the applicant.

4. Members of the committee, other than the chairman, will re-port the grades in their respective branches to the chairman; he will arrange and report to the County Superintendent.

5. Teachers named on the committee will not serve if they have pupils or members of their family in the class but are requested to secure a substitute at an early day and notify the chairman. If any member of the committee cannot serve he will please notify the chairman.

6. Blanks for the teacher's report will be furnished by the Su-perintendent upon request.

7. Mark the papers as follows: (1) Put a cross mark at every error in fact, in spelling, in punctuation, in capitalization and in syntax. (2) Mark on the margin opposite the answer the per-cent. you think it is worth. (3) Add the credits and mark the re-sult in per cent. at the top of each manuscript. (4) The name of the examiner of each set of papers shall be written at the end of each manuscript.

The examination will include the following common branches: spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, grammar, his-tory, physiology.

Final Examination.

The Final Examination for 1917, in the Seventh and Eighth Grades, will be held in the High School Building, Gettysburg, Saturday, April 28th at 8:30 o'clock A. M.

The examination will be under the supervision of the County Superintendent who will be assisted by a committee of teachers.

1. The examination will include the common branches.

2. Members of the committee, whose pupils or members of their family enter this class, will be excused from serving.

3. If any member of the committee cannot be present at the examination he will please notify the County Superintendent.

4. Diplomas will be granted to those making an average of seventy with no mark below fifty.

5. The aim of this examination is twofold: (1) To graduate pupils from the Eighth Grade and thereby permitting non-resi-dents to enter High School. (2) To unify High School entrance requirements and to furnish a basis of comparison for principals and teachers. We, therefore, suggest that each principal of the county should give this examination to his eighth grade and re-port to us as suggested above. High School principals in admit-ting pupils from their own grade schools are not required to pass them upon this test. They may give them an additional examina-tion, if they desire.

6. Non-resident pupils are required to pass the Central and Final Examinations and receive the common school diploma in or-der to attend High School at the expense of their district.

TEACHERS' CERTIFICATES.

Candidates for Provisional Certificates must be eighteen years of age and must pass examinations in the following subjects: Or-thography, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, Grammar, United States History, History of Pennsylvania, Physiology and Hygiene, Civil Government, Elementary Algebra, Seeley's History of Education and Carney's Country Life and Country School.

Young people with no more training than a High School educa-tion or less than its equivalent should not think of trying to teach without first attending some teachers' training school for at least one term.

Candidates for Professional Certificates must have taught at least two years with success, and in addition to the above named subjects must pass an examination in two of the following: Music, Drawing, Plane Geometry, General History, English Literature, Physical Geography, Botany, Zoology or Physics and Seeley's History of Education and Carney's Country Life and Country School.

No teacher should make application for a Professional Certifi-cate who is not thoroughly qualified from educational and profes-sional standpoint, and who does not attend a teachers' training school the coming spring or summer. Experience alone does not count. Scholarship, a progressive spirit and worth in the school room count most.

Please do not think because you have taught two or more terms of school that you are eligible for a Professional Certificate. You should take into consideration your professional ability and training.

Back to Her Tender Years.

Don't let your beef be very tough. It is evident from an old cow. Mrs. Haselbach let me tell you, sir, that the tenderest beef I ever ate was from a cow fifteen or twenty years old. Boarder—That's easily explained. The cow was so old she was childish.—Chi-cago Tribune.

A Woman and a Trunk.

Griggs—Weren't you surprised that the customs inspector didn't find those things you smuggled in? Briggs—Oh, no. My wife stowed them away. You see, she can pack things in a trunk where she can't even find them her-self.—Exchange.

Calendars of the Aztecs.

Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their counterpart among the most an-cient known races. The Aztecs, for ex-ample, were well supplied with calen-dars, and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were pub-lished in stone and set up in public places.

To Help Him Out.

"You are lying so clumsily," said the observant judge to a litigant who was making a dubious statement of his case, "that I would advise you to get a lawyer."—Browning's Magazine.

Jennie Wade Facts Wanted.

No incident connected with the great Battle of Gettysburg seems to have attracted so much general in-terest as that pertaining to Mary Virginia Wade, a Gettysburg girl, whose father was a captain in the Pennsylvania Militia in 1841, whose grandfather was an aide-de-camp to General Lafayette at the battle of Brandywine, and whose great-grand-father, Colonel Chidney Wade, was killed in the battle of Brandywine.

The girl, coming from soldier stock, took a very active part in assisting the Union cause at Gettysburg, not only as some suppose. On June 26th, 1863, when she devoted her talents as a seamstress to the remodeling of her brother's uniform in order that he might join the 21st Pennsylvania Cavalry leaving for the scene of ac-tion. The 10th New York Cavalry had been in Gettysburg during the winter of '61 and '62, and many a but-ton and alteration in the soldiers' uniforms was made by this loyal girl.

On the afternoon of July 1st after the 1st and 11th Corps of the Army of the Potomac retreated through Gettysburg to take up their position on Cemetery Hill, Virginia Wade brought cold water from the windlass well at the rear of her yard and fur-nished this water for the canteens of the men who had been fighting since the early morning on Seminary Ridge and to whom this water must have indeed been very welcome.

On the night of July 1st the home of her married sister, Georgia Wade McClellan, was immediately between the outposts of the Union and Con-federate lines. Union soldiers were wounded and killed in the Wade's yard and the moaning and the crying of these men in their great suffering was heard by the girl who again showed the true blue by going to them as soon as darkness would per-mit and in rendering such aid as was in her power.

On July 2nd Union soldiers came to the door asking for bread, and she began to prepare bread and biscuits to meet these needs.

She was accidentally killed by a stray shot at 8:30 o'clock on the morning of July 3rd, '63, while in the act of preparing food for the Union soldiers.

The United States Government in investigating the matter of her ser-vices, subsequently granted her mother, a pension, but the Jennie Wade incident is now being thor-oughly investigated by Mr. J. W. Johnston, of P. O. Box 578, Roches-ter, N. Y., who has had the co-opera-tion of Georgia Wade McClellan in the extensive investigations which he has conducted during the past six months.

If there are any Union soldiers still living who saw this Gettysburg girl, performing the services for which she is famed in history, these veterans will please communicate with Mr. Johnston, since he is preparing a vol-ume on the subject and desires as many testimonials as possible.

Doubtless if there are any veterans still living who saw this girl, the reminiscences which they have will be of great interest.

IT'S FOOLISH TO SUFFER

When So Many Gettysburg People Are Pointing the Way Out.

You may be brave enough to stand backache or headache or dizziness. But, if, in addition urination is dis-ordered, look out! If you don't try to fix your sick kidneys, you may fall into the clutches of dangerous dis-ease before you know it. But, if you live more carefully and help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, you can stop the pains you have and avoid future danger as well. Don't experiment—use the remedy Gettys-burg people are publicly endorsing. Read this case:

Mrs. John L. Menchey, 46 Breck-enridge St., Gettysburg, says: "Sev-eral times in the past I suffered from backache and dizzy headaches. My kidneys acted irregularly. Doan's Kidney Pills procured at the Peo-ple's Drug Store, gave me such good benefit that I haven't found it neces-sary to use them in a long time." Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't sim-ply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Menchey had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Fable of Two Maidens.

Once there were two maidens who sought to catch a nice young man, and it was a false start in the eyes of the undiscriminating, for the one was ex-ceddingly fair to look upon and dressed stylishly, while the other was plain of countenance.

The pretty girl smiled sweetly on the nice young man and talked to him till she dazzled him with her beauty and charmed him with her wit. The plain one gazed wonderingly at him and made him talk to her of divers things, while she listened, entranced at his wisdom and learning.

He took the pretty girl out riding, to the theater and bought her chocolates and flowers, and all the knowing ones said she had struck a winner. When one day he married the plain girl and took her on the continent for their honeymoon.

The pretty girl had made him very much pleased with her, but the plain girl had gone one better and made him very much more pleased with himself.

Moral.—The people who read human nature as they run generally get lost to the wire.—Pearson's.

It is not every man that can afford to wear a shabby coat.—Cotton.

Beauty of Pennsylvania.

In one respect only Pennsylvania is unchanged and unchangeable. Men have denit harshly and shamefully by her, but nature has crowned her with beauty. Her founder, knowing nothing of his broad tracts, save that they were forest lands, gave to the new province the pretty name of Sylvania, and Charles II., always a pastmaster of words, prefixed the Penn, for which pleasant conceit every son and daughter of the state owes him a grateful thought. Thus the word Pennsylvania perpetuates history, honors a noble name and symbolizes the loveliness of the land, a land of woods and waters, hills and valleys, fat farms and rocky solitudes. The shrieking engine that drags its trainload of passengers through the valley of the Juniata, across ridge after ridge of the Alleghenies, past the Tuscarora gap and the succession of narrows—Long Narrows, Jack's Narrows, Packsaddle Narrows—has traversed a country so widely and nobly beautiful that, in Eu-rope, it would attract the tourists of the world.—Agnes Repplier in Ameri-can Magazine.

Sitting on a Tack.

A thing is tragic or humorous ac-cording to the point of view. The man who sits on a tack does not share the onlookers' amusement. In fact, he is not only pained at his own misfor-tune, but he is pained because he oc-casionally some one else to find a de-gree of pleasure in his unseemly plight.

Now, it is perfectly safe to make this positive statement in this connection—the person who witnessed the other's unfortunate encounter with the tack never deliberately sits on the same tack himself. Indeed, he is particu-larly cautious about sitting down any-where soon thereafter without looking for a tack.

Nor is this an indictment of tacks. Tacks serve a very real and useful purpose in this world, but they have their place, which is not in localities where they may be sat upon.—William C. Lengel in Hoggson Magazine.

Caught Him Beth Ways.

"I ask you to pay me this bill," said a tailor to a waggish debtor.

"Do you owe anybody anything?" asked the wag.

"No, sir," replied the tailor.

"Then you can afford to wait." And off he walked.

A day or two afterward the tailor called again. Our wag was not at his wits' end, so, turning to his creditor, he said:

"Are you in debt to anybody?"

"Yes, sir, I am sorry to say I am."

"Well, why don't you pay?"

"I haven't got the money," replied the tailor, with a woebegone coun-tenance.

"That's just my case, my dear sir. I am glad to perceive that you can ap-preciate your position. I always re-spected your judgment, sir. Give me your hand, sir."—London Mail.

Some Geographical Doubles.

Accidental doubles of geography are very curious. There are the two total-ly un-connected Gallicias, the one in Austria-Hungary and the one in Spain. As to the Carpathians, the doubling occurs between the ancient and the modern atlases. On the map of the ancients we find a people named Carpi in the north of what is now Hungary and north of them the Carpathus moun-tains. But "Carpathian" in Vergil, Horace and Ovid means something quite different. The Carpathian sea was the sea between Rhodes and Crete, from the island of Carpathus, now Scarpanto, and the "Carpathian old man" was Proteus, who lived and no doubt practiced his quick change tricks there.—London Spectator.

Fooled His Subjects.

King Ericus of Sweden publicly confessed that he was a sorcerer and magi-cian. He was the owner of an en-chanted cap, which he pretended enabled him to control the spirits and change the direction of the winds at pleasure. So firmly did his subjects believe in the supernatural powers of their ruler that when a storm arose they would exclaim, "Ah, the king is again wearing the magic cap."

What She Misses.

"I suppose you miss your husband terribly?"

BRITISH RESOURCES SAFE

WITH AMERICA'S WEALTH
BACK OF BRITAIN

Giving the Support Needed to Get
Over the Difficult Places With Ease.

Hartley Withers, the financial expert who succeeded Sir George Paish as editor of The Economist, in reply to a question as to what part America was likely to play from the financial viewpoint in the near future in the world's war, did not hesitate to say that American sympathy, turned into golden support, would assure driving the war to a victorious end for the Allies. With America out of the struggle, the Allies could in any event depend on appreciable financial aid until the end, but there would always be the grave problem of adjusting international finances. What was needed to push the war to a successful conclusion was money, and that America had as the richest nation in the world.

Must Turn to America if in Need.

"What Great Britain has just done in the matter of the immense war loan running up well beyond $3,500,000,000, shows to the world that Britain is financially solid," said Mr. Withers. "That loan means the support of all classes of Britons in the financing of the war. But beyond the loan is the necessity of having a market where Britain will be able to turn should her finances become strained. We can run the war for months on the money Britons have put into the loan, but we must maintain the stability of foreign exchange and it is to America we have to turn for it."

"If America withheld her financial support from Great Britain, we would have difficulty in keeping exchange up. With America back of us, British credit is inexhaustible. That is what it means to have America on our side of the fight. Our money relations with America since the beginning of the war have always been difficult to maintain without market disturbances because there has been so much England has had to buy from the United States and requiring so great an outflow of gold to do it. We had to establish the necessary credits with America, and that involved for months exporting gold there, besides the selling of American securities that were held in Britain, and in short turning the whole trend of financial advantage to America."

"America quickly became the richest financial power in the world. After Britain had for months been buying supplies in prodigious quantities, America found herself with too much gold. The paradoxical eventuality came of America having more money than she knew what to do with, and America wanted to get rid of it. So she started sending it back to England on loan at high percentage rates. When Britain had sent some $1,250,000,000 of gold to America it began to trickle back to us to earn interest for American bankers. All this shifting of gold, first from here to America, then back again, would have ruffled the money market had it not been for the underlying feeling in America that at bottom Great Britain was financially stable and that there was nothing to make any one worry."

"Just before America broke off relations with Germany we had in our banks a huge quantity of American gold earning interest, but within a few days after President Wilson's action in breaking off with Germany American bankers began to call for it. There has been a flow of gold back to America since, and it has made some of our bankers a bit uneasy. But it is only a temporary thing and there is no doubt that in a very short time there will be a satisfactory settlement of the whole financial ruffie."

British Operations in This Country.

"The Britain has sold back to America approximately $25,000,000,000 of American railroad and other securities that were held here. She has floated loans in America aggregating $210,000,000. Britain also has placed her credit back of her allies. Even with all this strain she is financially sound, and America knows it. America will back Britain to the end of the war, for America has cast the die against Germany, no matter whether the breach of relations goes so far as that. American financiers will see that Britain and her allies lack for nothing they need, and the war may go along on a credit basis indefinitely."

"America did not need convincing as to Britain's financial solidity, but if she did our big $3,500,000,000 loan—it will run over that. I am told—was enough to do it. And while the support of the loan was general, running to all classes, it must be said in truth that it did not put the slightest strain on Britain's pocketbook. To put it another way, it has become evident since the Government began to count up that Britain's manasses, while contributing liberally, did not go to the point of privation in the support they gave."

"Britain for twenty-five years before the war had been leading a life that every year was growing more luxurious. It is only now the people are beginning to realize seriously that they owe a debt to their country in economizing. While the working classes, therefore, went into the war loan they did not do it in a manner to deprive themselves of anything in the way of comfort. It simply means that with careful regulation of individual finances Britain's masses will be able to dispose without any appreciable effort of another loan of $3,000,000,000 or more if they are called on to do it."

"In the last loan insurance companies, commercial firms, and private individuals of extensive means subscribed liberally. The banks were not called upon. The next loan will be one of the people's own if the Government finds the necessity of calling for it."

"It all comes to this, that after thirty months of war Britain, while spending money at a staggering pace every day, has not yet begun to touch the bottom of her coffers. And it is comforting to us to know that with America as her financial ally Britain's credit never will end, no matter what strain is put upon it."—New York Times.

Governor Vetoes Investigation.

To the Honorable, the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania: Gentlemen—I return herewith, file of the Senate No. 1, entitled "A joint resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to investigate alleged maladministration in public office and making an appropriation therefor."

This resolution has been freely discussed in the public press and by the members of your honorable body. The people are fairly conversant with its contents, its purpose and its origin. It has not been held to be in any important sense a measure in the interests of the people of Pennsylvania. It has no constructive purpose or aim. It is solely a partisan, factional measure to give to an interested faction a powerful political club to compel its opponents, and indeed all independent citizens, to bow on subservient knee or suffer the consequences.

CAN MENACE INNOCENT OPPONENTS.

The committee it creates would have full power to investigate all State, city, county, borough and township officials. It can even investigate individuals and could protect its political friends and menace its innocent political opponents. Such power should never be given any one. It was never intended to be and cannot lawfully be exercised by any legislative committee in a constitutional government. No essential good can flow from such a commission to the people of Pennsylvania.

There is no recognition of the rights under law of the parties it may select for investigation. They have no specification of charges. They are not advised of the source of the charges nor the persons responsible for the same. They have no appeal from the rules of procedure that the committee may formulate. They are, in fact, denied the fundamental rights which throughout the civilized world, in all courts of justice, are guaranteed to any and all persons.

The resolution would condone perjury; would invite irresponsible men to swear falsely against their fellows; would give opportunity for false statements, with no opportunity to disprove the same, and would at great cost to the citizens of this State, who are the least interested and most injured, conduct an investigation with public funds that are needed in many vastly more important services to our citizens. Moreover, the entire field of fact and the entire truth relative to the administration of the State's business can be known at any time by anybody without any expense whatever.

INVITES FAIR INVESTIGATION.

When this joint resolution was before your honorable body on January 29, 1917, I addressed a communication to you in which I specifically stated that "I court and invite the widest and fullest investigation of my official acts and of those of all associated with me in public service. I wish only that the investigation be so free, so fair, so impartial and so thorough as to establish definitely the truth or untruth of any charge that may be made." I submit that this joint resolution does not assure any such result.

This administration is confident that its acts, when published, will meet the hearty approval of all free, unbiased, fair citizens and we shall at any time furnish to you any and all information you may desire that will in any way make known to you and to the whole people the things we have done and shall continue to do to give to the people all facts relating to our public service. We are ready any moment in any fair way to co-operate to the full in the attainment of this end.

Factional strife works only harm. It can accomplish no essential good. Let the truth be known. Let the motives as well as the acts of men be truly revealed. Let the sense of justice, fair play and honor have full expression and the people will decide. That the outcome will develop the fact that this Administration is giving itself steadily, honestly and earnestly to a clean and unselfish service to the whole people is my assurance and my conviction.

For these reasons this joint resolution is not approved.

MARTIN G. BRUMBAUGH.

Lincoln Highway Representatives.

One of the largest and most efficient organizations working on a national scale upon a project of patriotic and economic interest to the whole country, does business the year round without a cent of recompense to its members for their services. Those comprising the organization are the State, County and Local Consuls of the Lincoln Highway Association.

In the 68 counties of the 11 States traversed by the Lincoln Highway in its 3,600-mile route between New York and San Francisco there are now 211 regularly appointed Consuls of the National Organization located at various points along the way. The major number of them have held the position of Lincoln Highway Consul since the proclamation and establishment of the transcontinental route in 1913.

Road improvement as exemplified by the Lincoln Highway makes a wide appeal as the private vocations of the Lincoln Highway Consuls indicate. Among them are found bankers, lawyers, farmers, merchants, in fact representative members of every walk of American life. Each of them gives freely of his time to the Lincoln Highway as an object of common interest.

Practically all of the Lincoln Highway Consuls are men of local and state-wide influence and some of national prominence.

PRESIDENT ASKS CONGRESS

FOR AUTHORITY TO ACT IN ANY CRISIS ARISING.

Such Authority Might Make Unnecessary the Convening of New Congress on March 5.

Gentlemen of the Congress:

"I have again asked the privilege of addressing you because we are moving through critical times, during which it seems to me to be my duty to keep in close touch with the houses of Congress so that neither counsel nor action shall run at cross-purposes between us."

"On the 3d of February, I officially informed you of the sudden and unexpected action of the Imperial German Government in declaring its intention to disregard the promises it had made to this Government in April last, and undertake immediate submarine operations against all commerce, whether of belligerents or of neutrals that should seek to approach Great Britain and Ireland, the Atlantic coasts of Europe, or the harbors of the eastern Mediterranean and to conduct those operations without regard to the established restrictions of international practice, without regard to any considerations of humanity even, which might interfere with their object. That policy was forthwith put into practice. It has now been in active execution for nearly four weeks."

American Commerce Hit by Raids.

"Its practical results are not yet fully disclosed. The commerce of other neutral nations is suffering severely, but not, perhaps, very much more severely than it was already suffering before the first of February, when the new policy of the Imperial Government was put into operation. We have asked the co-operation of the other neutral Governments to prevent these depredations, but so far none of them has thought it wise to join us in any common course of action. Our own commerce has suffered, is suffering, rather in apprehension than in fact, rather because so many of our ships are timidly keeping to their home ports than because American ships have been sunk."

"Two American vessels have been sunk, the Housatonic and the Lyman M. Law. The case of the Housatonic, which was carrying foodstuffs consigned to a London firm, was essentially like the case of the Frye, in which, it will be recalled, the German Government admitted its liability for damages, and the lives of the crew, as in the case of the Frye, were safeguarded with reasonable care. The case of the Law, which was carrying lemon box staves to Palermo, disclosed a ruthlessness of method which deserves grave condemnation, but was accompanied by no circumstances which might not have been expected at any time in connection with the use of the submarine against merchantmen as the German Government has used it."

"Overt Act" Has Not Occurred.

"In sum, therefore, the situation we find ourselves in with regard to the actual conduct of the German submarine warfare against commerce and its effects upon our own ships and people is substantially the same that it was when I addressed you on the 3d of February, except for the tying up of our shipping in our own ports because of the unwillingness of our ship owners to risk their vessels at sea without insurance or adequate protection, and the very serious congestion of our commerce which has resulted, a congestion which is growing rapidly more and more serious every day. This in itself might presently accomplish in effect what the new German submarine orders were meant to accomplish, so far as we are concerned. We can only say that the overt act which I have ventured to hope the German commanders would in fact avoid has not occurred."

"But while this is happily true, it must be admitted that there have been certain additional indications and expressions of purpose on the part of the German press and the German authorities which have increased rather than lessened the impression that, if our ships and our people are spared, it will be because of fortunate circumstances, or because the commanders of the German submarines which they may happen to encounter, exercise an unexpected discretion and restraint rather than because of the instructions under which those commanders are acting."

"It would be foolish to deny that the situation is fraught with the gravest possibilities and dangers. No thoughtful man can fail to see that the necessity for definite action may come at any time, if we are in fact, and not in word merely, to defend our elementary rights as a neutral nation. It would be most imprudent to be unprepared."

"I cannot in such circumstances be unmindful of the fact that the expiration of the term of the present Congress is immediately at hand, by constitutional limitation; and that it would in all likelihood require an unusual length of time to assemble and organize the Congress which is to succeed it. I feel that I ought, in view of that fact, obtain from you full and immediate assurance of the authority which I may need at any moment to exercise."

Claims Authority to Act in Crisis.

"No doubt I already possess that authority without special warrant of law, by the plain implication of my constitutional duties and powers; but I prefer, in the present circumstances, not to act upon general implication. I wish to feel that the authority and the power of the Congress are behind me in whatever it may become necessary for me to do. We are jointly the servants of the people and must act together in their spirit, so far as we can divine and interpret it."

"No one doubts what it is our duty to do. We must defend our commerce and the lives of our people in the midst of the present trying circumstances with discretion, but with clear and steadfast purpose. Only the method and the extent remain to be chosen, upon the occasion, if occasion should indeed arise. Since it has unhappily proved impossible to safeguard our neutral rights by diplomatic means against the unwarranted infringements they are suffering at the hands of Germany, there may be no resource but to armed neutrality, which we shall know how to maintain and for which there is abundant American precedent."

"It is devoutly to be hoped that it will not be necessary to put armed force anywhere into action. The American people do not desire it, and our desire is not different from theirs. I am sure that they will understand the spirit in which I am now acting, the purpose I hold nearest my heart and would wish to exhibit in everything I do. I am anxious that the people of the nations at war also should understand and not mistrust us. I hope that I need give no further proofs and assurances than I have already given throughout nearly three years of anxious patience that I am the friend of peace and mean to preserve it for America so long as I am able."

"I am not now proposing or contemplating war or any steps that need lead to it. I merely request that you will accord me by your own vote and definite bestowal the means and the authority to safeguard in practice the right of a great people who are at peace and who are desirous of exercising none but the rights of peace to follow the pursuits of peace in quietness and good will—rights recognized time out of mind by all the civilized nations of the world. No course of my choosing or of theirs will lead to war."

Burden on Others' Aggression.

"War can come only by the willful acts and aggressions of others. You will understand why I can make no definite proposals or forecasts of action now and must ask for your supporting authority in the most general terms. The form in which action may become necessary cannot yet be foreseen."

"I request, also, that you will grant me at the same time along with the powers I ask, a sufficient credit to enable me to provide adequate means of protection where they are lacking, including adequate insurance against present war risks."

"I believe the people will be willing to trust me to act with restraint, with prudence and in the true spirit of amity and good faith that they have themselves displayed throughout these trying months; and it is in that belief that I request that you will authorize me to supply our merchant ships with defensive arms, should that become necessary, and with the means of using them, and to employ any other instrumentalities or methods that may be necessary and adequate to protect our ships and our people in their legitimate and peaceful pursuits on the seas."

For the Defense of Human Lives.

"I have spoken of our commerce and of the legitimate errands of our people on the seas but you will not be misled as to my main thought, the thought that lies beneath these phrases and gives them dignity and weight. It is not of material interests merely that we are thinking. It is, rather, of fundamental human rights, chief of all the right of life itself. I am thinking, not only of the rights of Americans to go and come about their proper business by way of the sea, but also of something much deeper, much more fundamental than that."

"I am thinking of these rights of humanity without which there is no civilization. My theme is of those great principles of compassion and of protection which mankind has sought to throw about human lives, the lives of non-combatants, the lives of men who are peacefully at work keeping the industrial processes of the world quick and vital, the lives of women and children and of those who supply the labor which ministers to their sustenance. We are speaking of no selfish material rights, but of rights which our hearts support and whose foundation is that righteous passion for justice upon which all law, all structures alike of family, of State and of mankind must rest, as upon the ultimate base of our existence and our liberty. I cannot imagine any man with American principles at his heart hesitating to defend these things."

Plan Experiments with Dust Sprays.

One of the important features of the work of the Bureau of Zoology of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture during the coming summer will be experiments with dust sprays in place of liquid sprays for the control of fruit insects and diseases.

Zoologist J. G. Sanders says that preliminary experiments in several States indicate that the dust spray method of application is very much cheaper, not only from the standpoint of cost of material, but from the cost of labor. As high as forty acres of large apple trees may be treated in a single day with one machine, while by the liquid spray method no machine can possibly spray over eight or ten acres in a similar time.

The experimental work as outlined by Professor Sanders is to take two years on account of the variable seasons which effect such work strongly. Teachers have been made to the Department of Agriculture of materials to use in the work and it is expected to test out the merits of various spraying machines. The experimental work will be conducted in two or three sections of the State.

The applications of powdered arsenate of lead, necessarily with various percentages of sulfur and lime, will be tested to secure the best result at the least expense for the chemicals. Careful computation will be made of an effective control by this method of the important insects and diseases which injure apples and prevent the formation of perfect fruit on the trees.

Reports of progress with the work will be made from time to time and given to the public of the State and the final report will outline the various periods desirable for best spraying results.

There's Magic in a Smile!

More than do studied words and phrases, a good warm smile makes friends and holds them.

A smile comes naturally when we meet our friends and acquaintances face to face, in our offices, at our homes or on the street. And why should it not when the wires of the telephone bring a caller to us?

There is no smile in a curt "hello" or "well" in answer to a call; none in a dull, disinterested voice. But there is a smile in a genial greeting, an answer that tells just who is talking, and a tone that reflects both interest and attention.

Here are two of the stunning coats

Illustrating how remarkable
a line we have procured

EVERY clever woman will notice how subtle is the very simplicity of these models, and how effectively youthful. A single line over-emphasized ever so little would have spoiled their charm and their correctness.

The ones shown are two Wooltex models newly arrived from The H. Black Company, celebrated makers of young women's coats and suits.

This is the CONNERRE, a characteristic coat of the best designing. Notice how the side panel effect gives those long graceful lines, adding to the slenderness of the figure. It comes in gabardines of all the desired shades and is trimmed in Khaki-Kool silk, now so much wanted. Left illustration.

No. 3260. Here is another use of the new and resourceful side panel, extending full to the hem of the skirt, giving to the garment graceful lines in a real sport coat. A clever touch is the pocket in the panel—one on either side. Made up in popular velour checks, and tailored the Wooltex way. Right illustration.

The earlier one buys this spring the surer she is of getting authentic creations---we have managed to get a rather large order accepted by this busy house, The H. Black Company, but they can give us no assurance about re-orders.

NATIONAL CAPITAL MADE "DRY"

Congressman C. Wm. Beales Votes for a "Wet" Capital.

Prohibition won a double victory in Congress Wednesday night, February 28, when the House passed by a vote of 273 to 137 the bill to make the national capital dry, and the Senate and House conferees on the postal appropriation bill unexpectedly announced an agreement under which the Reed "bone dry" amendment is virtually assured of enactment.

Hope of agreeing on the postal supply measure had been abandoned by the conferees, who Tuesday submitted a resolution to continue existing postal appropriations for another year. Wednesday night, however, they got together on a report which includes the Reed amendment prohibiting shipment of liquor into prohibition states, and which they expect to present in both houses tomorrow or Friday. The leaders thought there was no doubt of its acceptance in Senate and House. They are taking it for granted, too, that President Wilson will approve both that and the District of Columbia prohibition bill.

The District bill, which would become effective November 1, was brought to a vote after a stubborn opposition had delayed for several hours the final roll call which the leaders knew would mean passage. All day and until late in the evening they stood by their guns, exhausting every parliamentary expedient to ward off action and watching for an opportunity to put the measure into a position that would mean its failure with the expiration of the session Sunday.

Failing to displace the bill or to force an adjournment, the filibusters centered their attention on an effort to adopt amendments that would throw it into conference and prevent enactment at this session. They made their last stand on an enactment that would have given the people of the District a referendum on the proposal and would have put into the measure a provision prohibiting importation of liquor for personal use. This was voted down 171 to 232. Various other amendments were rejected by similar majorities. Congressman Beales voted wet with the 437. Congressman-at-Large Lafean voted dry.

Highway Controversy.

A bill has been introduced in the State Senate proposing a change in the road from Gettysburg to Carlisle, to go by Mt. Tabor instead of by Aspers, Gardners and Idaville. This bill is calculated to open up the controversy which the routing of road under the State Highway System in 1911 occasioned at that time. The bill was introduced by Senator Leiby to amend section six of the Sproul Act so far as relates to Route 41.

"Route Forty-one, from Carlisle to Gettysburg, commencing in Carlisle and running by way of Mount Holly Springs, Hunter's Run, and Goodyear, to a point on the dividing line between Cumberland and Adams counties thence by way of Idaville, Gardners, Bendersville, Biglerville, and Goldenville, into Gettysburg, Adams county, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Route Forty-one, from Carlisle to Gettysburg, commencing in Carlisle and running by way of Mount Holly Springs, Hunter's Run, and Goodyear, to a point on the dividing line between Cumberland and Adams counties thence by way of Mt. Tabor, Bendersville, Biglerville, and Goldenville, into Gettysburg, Adams county."

Bridge Building Under Consideration.

County Commissioners Slagle, March and Keffer at their Tuesday's meeting heard two bridge applications, one for a bridge at Red Rock, where Marsh Creek and Willoughby Run join in Cumberland township, the other over Brush Run in Mt. Pleasant township, on road between Bonneauville and New Oxford at Brush Run School House. The commissioners took the applications under advisement. The commissioners await probable State legislation to relieve the county of the repair of bridge over Conewago Creek on the Lincoln Way near New Oxford. If it does not fall to the State to make these repairs the commissioners will go ahead with reinforcements to the walls and the cutting away of part of the hump of bridge so as to render the approaches less dangerous.

The commissioners have postponed their meeting for Tuesday, March 6th to Wednesday, March 7th.

O'Neal, the local agent, Mrs. W. A. Granville, Mrs. J. L. Butt, and Mrs. S. S. Neely.

To Test All Gas Pumps.

Inspector of Weights and Measures Norman J. King is going to have a big job on his hands in testing all gasoline pumps in the county. Last week James Sweeney, state chief of standards, was advised in an opinion by Deputy Attorney General Horace W. Davis to have a state-wide test made of all measuring pumps used in Pennsylvania for selling gasoline, oil and similar liquids and upon their approval to "have the adjusting nut at the top of the plunger rod so sealed as to be conspicuous." He is also advised that when sealers of weights and measures find the measure short upon test, to confiscate the pump and prosecute the dealer operating it.

This advice is given in a query from the chief as to his powers of inspection of such apparatus, extensively used in the state. The opinion says "this appears to be drastic action, but in our opinion is warranted under the circumstances."

The chief is also advised to require all jobbers and manufacturers in this class of measures to give him notice upon sale of any pumps, giving name of purchaser and location, so that the sealer in the territory shall have opportunity to inspect the pump prior to its operation.

Inspector King in his recent testing of scales found a platform scale in Gettysburg that had gotten out of order and was weighing short. It was used to weigh cattle and wagons. A farmer brought some cattle to town that had been weighed down the country and when weighed here there was too much difference to be explained by driving the cattle here. Upon inspection the scales were found to have a shortage of 8 lbs. in every 100 lbs. The scale was condemned and sealed. It will be overhauled in the attempt to discover the trouble.

Freight Wreck on W. M. R. R.

All traffic on the Western Maryland division between Highfield and Gettysburg was tied up last Friday morning by a wreck which occurred between McKnightstown and Seven Stars when six cars of a heavy freight bound for Baltimore, jumped the track. The train was made up of mixed coal hoppers and box cars, but only the coal cars left the track. No one was hurt. Advices were sent to the dispatcher's office at Hagerstown in time to send the Pittsburgh Express over the main line, and passengers for Gettysburg, Hanover, York, and other points were transferred around the wreckage to a special train made up at this place and sent to the scene.

A wrecking crew was also hurried to the scene and worked for a number of hours to clean up the wreckage, get the cars back on the rails and put the track in condition for traffic. The exact cause of the wreck has not been stated but it is supposed to have been through a brake rigging dropping or some other minor trouble which made the seven cars jump.

Mrs. Francis C. Knouse and her little son of Bethlehem are visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Trostle and Mr. and Mrs. David Knouse.

Last Tuesday about 8 inches of snow fell here, the deepest for this winter.

Testing Woollens.

Pure woollens are adulterated even more than silk because they are in greater demand and also because they are quite easy to imitate. Many a yard of cloth sold as "pure wool" contains from 30 to 60 per cent cotton. Blankets sold as "half wool" have frequently been found to contain only 10 per cent of pure wool. There are machines today which cleverly wrap wool around cotton threads, and the finished product has every appearance of being "all wool." Another method of adulterating is by taking cotton cloth and "felting" short woolen threads upon its surface by means of heat, moisture and pressure.

A purchaser may be fully convinced from the appearance and feeling of cloth that it is all wool, but the only safe method is to take home the sample and make tests. Immerse the sample of so called wool in oil of vitriol for about two minutes. This will destroy the cotton, but the wool will not be affected. Another test is to moisten a sample with 30 per cent nitric acid. This will turn the wool yellow, but the cotton will retain its color.—Washington Post.

Parson Frake's Donation

And He Took the Bishop's Advice.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

When Arthur Frake was graduated from the theological seminary before taking his departure he called on the bishop to take leave of him and thank him for various acts of kindness the good old man had favored him with during his period of study.

"Well, my boy," said the bishop, "going out to service in the Lord's vineyard, eh? Sit down. I have a few words to say to you on one subject, and one subject only. You've got all the theology you need in the seminary. It isn't that which I wish to speak to you about. It isn't anything concerning the methods you should observe in your work. It is this:

"We clergymen are apt to be made or married—as all men are—by the wives we choose. Now, look out whom you marry. Your field is not a worldly field, and if you marry a worldly woman it will be better for you that you tied a millstone about your neck. It doesn't matter where you find a wife whether in the city or in the country. She should have a sympathetic nature so that she will sympathize with you in your work. Indeed, she should make your work her work."

This was the bishop's advice. Mr. Frake was much impressed with it, but he had his doubts about finding a girl that would fill his adviser's conditions. He had always associated with the upper ten thousand and had not found much usefulness among them. Instead of living for the world he had usually found them disposed to consider the world as especially created to administer to their comfort.

Nevertheless he shrank from taking a life partner except from the class to which he belonged. Would it not be better to be allied with a woman of fashion than with one whose unpolished manners would constantly put him to the blush? Then, too, his own family were to be considered. Naturally they would expect him to marry one whom they might receive as a social equal.

Mr. Frake's first call was to a village wherein dwelt only a few thousand people. His congregation was not at all like those of which he had been a member himself during his boyhood and youth. They were plain people, honest in their way, but as to spirituality, or, rather, humanity, he did not find them any better than those he had known in the city. One day soon after taking the pastorate while writing in his study, looking up from his sermon, he saw his housekeeper standing in the doorway.

"What is it, Mrs. Wells?" he asked.

"Mrs. Wells, fat and panting from a morning spent over the ironing board, wiped her forehead with a crisp white handkerchief.

"I wondered what would come next," she groaned. "First, there was the trouble making trouble over the disarranging of the pews, then the quarrel in the choir, and I knew that there would be a third calamity."

"You haven't told me what it is," replied Arthur Frake.

"A donation, sir!"

"A donation," he repeated, aghast.

"Dear me, I wish they wouldn't, Mrs. Wells. They mean well, but—"

"Oh, their intentions are all right," interrupted the housekeeper darkly, for she had served many ministers and many donation parties, "but they don't realize that by the time they've donated like a flock of locusts and eaten all the food they've brought and more, too, why, I've left with a house as clean as the inside of a jar of Bunsen's." She said this with a look of grim satisfaction.

"You haven't told me what it is," replied Arthur Frake.

"A donation, sir!"

wife. Certainly he had never met the girl of his dreams, and he was not likely to find her in this remote village.

There was not a speck of dust to be seen in the parsonage when the kerosene lamps were lighted. It would be an hour yet before the donation party would arrive, and some one was talking volubly to Mrs. Wells in the sitting room. Their voices reached the minister in his study. Mrs. Wells' wheezy tones were punctuated by another woman's shrill utterances.

"Millie Rhodes says it's the first time they've never been able to give five bushels of potatoes to the new minister, and I says to her, I says: 'Don't cry, Millie. Mr. Frake will understand how it is—your pa being sick so long and your ma dying, and all.' But she only said she wished she had something to give, because she had to stop putting anything into the plate at church. 'Seems to me, Mrs. Smith,' says she, 'seems to me poor folks are just squeezed tight to the wall. The Bible says not to place any value on money, and yet it's the only thing that seems to count in this world.' The speaker drew a long breath.

"Poor child!" sobbed Mrs. Wells. "I hope she ain't going to stay home just because she can't bring anything."

"I told her she would have to come anyway. Ann Dent is going to stay with Mr. Rhodes for a spell."

The doorbell rang, and Mrs. Wells hurried into the hall. Arthur Frake heard her exclamation of pleasure.

"Why, Millie, child, I am glad to see you!" she cried. "Come right in and meet Mr. Frake. You've never met him, your pa being sick ever since Mr. Frake came. Oh, Mr. Frake, here's the first one. Miss Millie Rhodes, from the Hollow farm!"

In this disjointed fashion Arthur Frake met a parishioner whom he had never seen. Millie Rhodes was a tall, fair girl, with soft blue eyes and a sweet mouth. She was dressed in black, and he recollected that they had said she had lost her mother. Her arms were filled with flowers—chrysanthemums of every color, great branches of crimson dogwood berries, trailing lengths of orange and scarlet bittersweet and a bunch of pink geraniums with sweet smelling leaves.

"It was all I had to bring," she said a little wistfully as she dropped them on the study table.

"And a beautiful donation, Miss Rhodes. I thank you," said the minister sincerely as he took her hand. "Will you add another favor—arrange them about the rooms? No, only in this room," he added whimsically.

So Millie Rhodes stepped lightly to and fro, arranging vases and bowls of flowers on mantelpiece and tables, trailing the dogwood and bittersweet berries over pictures and mirrors and at the minister's request placing the bowl of pink geraniums on his desk.

"Rose geraniums are my favorite flowers," he said gravely. And they were from that instant.

Then came the sound of laughter and a loud ringing at the front door. The house was filled with a merry crowd of the minister's flock, all pushing forward to shake his hand and utter good wishes. Each one brought something—a bag or bundle or basket—and soon the kitchen tables were heaped with bushels of potatoes, apples, dried fruit, bags of flour, jars of preserves and pickles, toothsome layer cakes and pies and all the goodies that farmers' wives know how to manufacture.

Millie Rhodes sat quietly in a corner with a group of friends, and there was a quiet happiness in her face that no one save Mrs. Wells and Sarah Smith and, of course, the minister quite understood.

Millie's donation beautified the minister's own room, and unconsciously her fingers had given the debt woman only touches that the room needed.

By and by some asked her to sing and she arose and, unaccompanied, sang in a sweet, dulcet voice many old ballads that brought tears to the eyes of the older people.

"I should like my wife to sing like that," thought Arthur Frake as he moved among his people.

This donation was not exactly like other donation parties. Even Emma Wells admitted that. To begin with there was such an abundance of gifts that the company could not possibly dispose of them at the supper, which was served at 10 o'clock.

Then Mr. Frake was young, and youth creates a different atmosphere. The old parsonage had always been a gloomy place in the pastorate of the aged Mr. Walker, and tonight there was such a feeling of cheerfulness and good fellowship between young and old that the parish was united in stronger bonds of love than ever before.

"Good night," they called as they went away—"good night, Mr. Frake, and good luck."

And Arthur Frake, having blessed them a few moments before, fell on his knees in the fragrant little study and poured out his soul in thankfulness for the kindness that was showered upon him.

And he especially prayed for Millie Rhodes, who had given what she could out of her meager store.

There came a day in the following year, after Millie had been bereft of her remaining parent, that Arthur Frake lingered at the Hollow farm and asked Millie to come and make the parsonage a home for him.

"It will be a donation," he smiled down at her, "the best donation you can make to me and my people. We need you, Millie Rhodes."

And when they were married, why, of course the minister's people must make another donation, and this time the parsonage was cozy and homelike with a woman's touch, the same touch which had lighted the flame of love in the minister's heart.

Invasions of Russia.

The first great invasion of Russia was that of the Huns, a race of fierce and warlike Asiatics, who swept over eastern Europe in the fourth century.

In the thirteenth century the golden horde of Tartars captured Russia, and from 1238 to 1462 the country was under the yoke of the Mongols. In 1395 Tamerlane invaded Russia, but retired. In 1402 the Slavs again gained the ascendancy, and Ivan III. (the Great) founded the present monarchy and introduced firearms and cannon into Russia.

In 1479 there was another great invasion of Tartars, but they were driven out. In 1613 the present royal family, the Romanoffs, gained the throne. In 1700 the Swedes invaded Russia, but after several victories they were routed.

The last great invasion of Russia was that of Napoleon. His disastrous retreat from Russia, in which most of his army was destroyed, marked the beginning of the end of his power.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Invisible Clock.

A public clock which can be heard, but not seen, is one of London's curious possessions. It is in the tower of St. Mary Abbot's church, Kensington, and is the only public clock in the immediate neighborhood. It chimes the quarters and the hours, but commits itself no further. It has no dial, no hands, no outward and visible sign of any kind to show that it is a clock. This eccentricity, it is explained, is the result of two causes—one aesthetic, the other financial. When the tower was built in 1579 a clock was suggested as an afterthought, but the architect protested that it would mean the addition of fifteen feet to the tower and the ruin of its cherished proportions. A second point was that the church, having but slender funds, could not afford a clock with a dial. A compromise was arrived at by installing the works of a chiming clock in the belfry without dial or hands.—Pearson's.

Profitable Pebbles.

The flint pebble industry gives occupation to many women and children along the French coast lying between Havre and Dieppe. The pebbles collected in and near Havre are selected for their spherical shape and are used exclusively for pulverizing in certain industries, particularly in the manufacture of cement and in copper mines being employed in the interior of large cylinders. In the cement industry the slow turning of the pebbles produces a powder which becomes an ingredient of the cement, while in the copper industry the metal is freed of all impurities by the grinding operation. The same kind of pebbles is used for crushing purposes in the manufacture of paint. Another important use of flint pebbles is in the manufacture of porcelain. The pebbles for this purpose being found between Fecamp and Calais.—Philadelphia Press.

A "Friday" Ship.

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who way back in the early years of the republic determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill fated craft have been received.

Salt in the Spectrum.

The extreme delicacy of the spectrum test is illustrated by the fact stated by Lommel that the three-millionth part of a milligram of a salt of sodium, an imperceptible particle of dust to the naked eye, is yet capable of coloring the flame of a candle yellow and of giving the yellow lines of sodium in the spectroscopic. Indeed, so dilute in the form of a common salt (sodium chloride) is so universally present as an impalpable dust floating in the air that it is next to impossible to get a spectrum which does not show the sodium lines.

Canning Factories.

Indications seem to be good that the county will have two new canning plants at an early date. On Thursday of last week at a meeting in Fruit Growers' Hall, Bendersville, C. C. Truax, president of the United Grocery Corporation, gave assurance that a canning plant will be located at Peach Glen this year. The plant will be known as the Adams Canning Company and have a capital of $50,000. No local funds are asked. The farmers are expected to provide vegetables and fruits needed and the prospects are that there will be no lack of either for a plant at Peach Glen.

A representative of an old established cannery at Baltimore has visited East Berlin and New Oxford and desires to locate a plant in this county and they ask no money to be invested in the plant. They want assurances that the farmers will plant between 300 and 400 acres in corn and also a liberal growing of tomatoes, beans, pumpkins, etc. The communities of the county should give every assurance required for the encouragement of these industries as they give an outlet for a market which is well worth having.
